A Donkey and the Load of Salt

Once a merchant bought many bags of salt. He had a donkey. He carried the bags of salt on it from village to village. One day they were crossing a stream. All of a sudden the donkey slipped and fell down. About half of the salt got washed away. The donkey got up. It found the bag light. It was very happy. It found a trick. It repeatedly did so while crossing the stream. The merchant was angry. He thought of a plan to teach it a lesson.

Next day he put a bag of cotton on its back. While crossing the stream it repeated the trick. Because of water the cotton-load became very heavy. It could not walk easily. The merchant beat it. It was very sad. Now it left its bad habit. The merchant happily loaded salt on its back again.
